extensive analysis of the music of the 18th century. Prerequisite: Graduate standing.

MUSC 5040 Music of the Twentieth Century (3)

This course involves a comprehensive study of 20th-century western 'art' music, and includes core competencies in both historical perspectives on musical developments since the beginning of the century to the present, and analytical techniques designed to master a theoretical understanding of these developments. The analytical work will include advanced aspects of tonality, modality, atonal theory, 12-tone theory, and set theory. The historical aspects will include consideration of individual composers, movements and 'isms,' aesthetics, and both political and social perspectives on cultural developments in the twentieth century. The development of your abilities to synthesize historical and analytical perspectives is an essential component of this course. Learning to understand the intellectual relationship between music literature and both historical and cultural contexts will also be a central concern of your study.

You will learn to read, interpret and identify scores and
